

GATTY-POST AHEAD OF THEIR FLIGHT SCHEDULE

Past Half-Way Point in 15,000-Mile Dash Around The World

HAVE LEFT IRKUTSK

Fliers Say They Are in Perfect Condition; Over Wild Country

IRKUTSK, Siberia, June 27.—Far ahead of their pell-mell schedule and well past the half-way point in their 15,000 mile dash around the world, Wiley Post and Harold Gatty sped their monoplane Winnie Mae out of Irkutsk today for an 850 mile hop to Blagoveshchensk, Siberia.

They landed here at 11:55 a. m. today (12:55 p. m., Friday, in Philadelphia) from Novo Sibirsk, completing the 1,050 miles in six hours and ten minutes, and hopped off again at 2:10 p. m., taking only a little more than two hours to prepare for a dash over some of the wildest country on the globe.

Originally they had planned to go on to Khabarovsk, 1,100 miles east of here, without a stop, but decided to make the shorter flight in order to pick up weather reports. They expected to reach Blagoveshchensk at 8 o'clock tonight and rest there until dawn tomorrow, then proceeding to Khabarovsk.

If weather conditions are favorable they expect to attempt a non-stop flight from Khabarovsk straight across the remaining stretch of Siberia, the Gulf of Tartary, the Sea of Okhotsk, the Kamchatka Peninsula and the Bering Sea to Nome, Alaska, a distance of 1,200 miles.

The Winnie Mae roared into Irkutsk with her motor working perfectly and landed alongside the Trans-Siberian Railway tracks after circling the city.

Morrisville Rotary Scouts Will Enjoy Week at Camp

MORRISVILLE, June 27.—The 1931 Rotary Scouts of Morrisville attended the service club meeting, last evening, and received attractive bronze medals with blue ribbons as well as an announcement they would be given a free week of camping at Buccoo this summer.

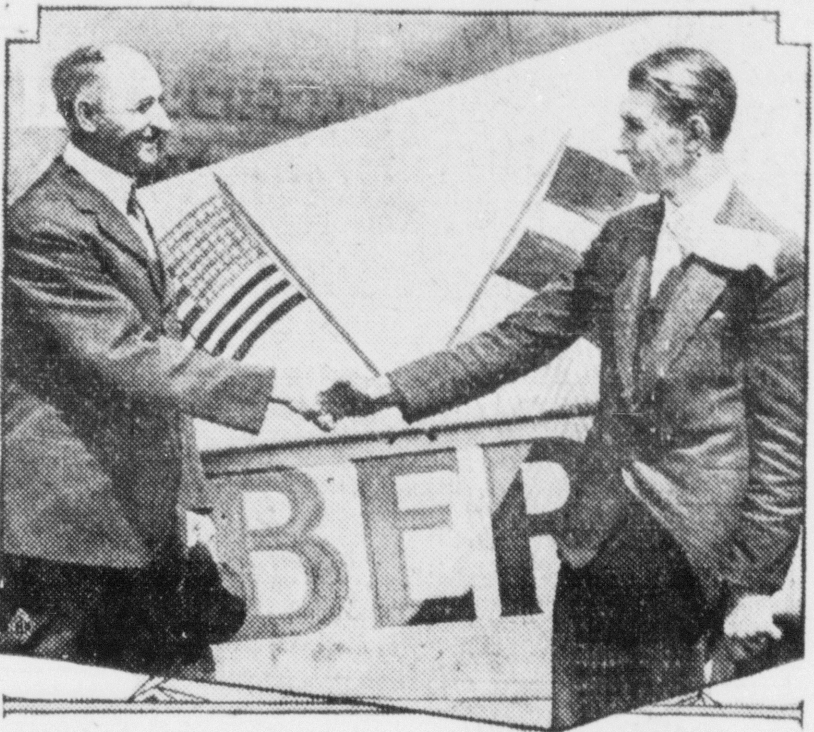

Each of the four troops of Morrisville were asked to select from their troop membership, a Scout who had shown the greatest qualities of leadership, advancement, and personal living up to his Scout oath and law.

Scouts winning the contest were: Presbyterian Church Troop, No. 1, Calvin Lenderman, Episcopal Church Troop, No. 2, John Summer; Methodist Church Troop, No. 3, Thomas Purcell, and the Catholic church troop, No. 4, John Gould. The Scouts were met by a special committee of the Rotary Club comprising Marty Flock, chairman of boys' work; Edmund H. Lovett, president of the Morrisville Rotary Club; and County Boy Scout Commissioner William Burgess.

Part of the Service Club program last evening consisted of demonstrations knots, first aid, artificial respiration, use of neckerchief, and patriotic observance. Scout Executive William F. Livermore spoke on "Scouting's Service to Boyhood in Bucks County." President of the Boy Scout Council, Thomas B. Stockham, who is also a member of the Service Club, gave some interesting statistics indicating the growth of the Scout movement in Bucks County since April 1927.

Scoutmasters William Schofield, Paul Nichols, Howard Antrobus, and P. James Doherty were thanked for their service to the boyhood of Morrisville in an appreciative manner by Rotary President Edmund H. Lovett as he formally presented and congratulated the four Boy Scouts on their accomplishments.

Lose Way, But Fly Atlantic

PICTURESQUE WONDERS ATTRACT TO CATSKILLS

Legendary Land Along Hudson Makes for Delightful Tour

OUTLINE OF THE ROUTE

Picturesque and magnificent are the scenic wonders of the legend laden lands of the Catskills. The Keystone Automobile Club has mapped a delightful motor journey through this section for the benefit of tourists who seek an attractive week-end trip or a more extended vacation tour.

"This legendary land of Rip Van Winkle annually attracts throngs of travelers and no more enchanting summer vacation spot can be found in the eastern section of the United States than the scenic Catskills," says Russel B. Carty, Representative of the motor club. "The entire round trip can be covered in approximately 658 miles."

From Bristol the tour leads through Langhorne, Newtown and Buckingham to Doylestown. Northward from here the tour leads over U. S. Route 611 through Easton and Martins Creek to state route 827 which is followed to the first concrete intersection. Here a left turn is made leading through Richmond to Mt. Bethel where U. S. Route 611 is again met and used to the Delaware Water Gap. From this point the tour continues straight ahead over state route 302 which is a short cut to Stroudsburg.

From here the tour continues over U. S. Route 209 to Port Jervis, N. Y. where U. S. Route 6N is met and followed to Kingston. A left turn into the Storm King Highway, U. S. Route 9W leads north to Catskill, occupying a picturesque position on the west bank of the Hudson. Here the trip into the famed mountain region begins over state route 23, known as the Mohican Trail. Through historic Leeds, founded two centuries ago by the Dutch, the journey leads to Cairo perched on the south slope of majestic Windham High Peak. Through Acra the trail continues a gradual climb to East Windham, the highest point where Mt. Zoar towers 2760 feet above the sea level and a magnificent view unfolds in all directions. Through Brookline, Windham and other attractive resorts the trail dips into the foothills to Prattsville.

MORRISVILLE MAN HIT BY TRAIN AT LANGHORNE

Injured Rushed to Trenton Hospital Where X-ray Is Taken

DID NOT HEAR WHISTLE

LANGHORNE, June 27.—Struck by an eastbound freight train while walking along the Reading Railroad tracks near Langhorne, yesterday afternoon, Leon Taylor, of Dieter street, Morrisville, is in serious condition at Mercer Hospital, Trenton, suffering from a broken right leg and internal injuries.

Taylor, who is not a railroad employee, is believed to have been walking to his home. As the train approached in the rear of him, the engineer blew the whistle, but evidently Taylor did not hear the warning. Seeing that he made no attempt to move off the tracks, the engineer applied the brakes, but could not stop the heavy vehicle from hitting Taylor.

The train crew summoned an ambulance and he was rushed to the hospital, where X-ray pictures are being made to determine the extent of his injuries.

Peter is accused by Cornelius of paying attention to Mrs. Vanderbilt. If Vanderbilt's suit is filed, a divorce which Arno is seeking may be delayed indefinitely, authorities say.

LANGHORNE GRADUATES TO CONTINUE STUDIES

Sixteen of 24 Young Folks Plan to Enter Other Schools

VARIETY OF WORK

LANGHORNE, June 27.—At least 16 of the 24 young folks who this week received diplomas from Langhorne-Middletown high school, will continue their formal learning. This was learned in an interview with each of the graduates.

Two of the young women will train for the nursing profession, Miss Helen Simon and Miss Angeline Perry. Neither of the two has decided just what hospital they will enter, however.

Five of the group have decided upon commercial work. The teacher training course at Rider College will be taken up in September by Miss Anna Pereira; while Samuel Charles will also study at Rider College in Trenton. Peirce Business School has been selected for pursuit of future studies by Miss Helen Bilger, who will enter there in September. Miss Mary Lees has chosen Palmer Business School, Philadelphia, where she will follow the secretarial course, entering next month. A business course will be taken up by Miss Mary Fitzpatrick, but this young woman is not certain where she will study.

Dietetics will interest Miss Alice Schlatter at Drexel Institute, Philadelphia; and although she is not certain where her course will be followed, Miss Ruth Beldier will study dramatic art. Miss Elizabeth Park has a desire to enter an art school, but no definite decisions have been reached by this young student regarding the place where she will enroll.

West Chester State Teachers College has been chosen by Miss Margaret Perry for future pursuits of knowledge. Two of the male members of the class will not consider their formal education complete, but will take up future courses. These two, Ross Buckman, and Lester Mather, have not made decisions however regarding the schools or colleges they will enter.

Pennsylvania State College has taken the attention of some of the graduates. Duncan Brown will there take up the study of research chemistry; Edward Brown will pursue a (Continued on Page 3)

SENATOR BUCKMAN EXPLAINS CANAL BILL NOW LAW

Denies He Was Author of The Measure Which Caused Discussion

ATTENDS THE MEETING

Senator Thanks the New Hope Council for Privilege Extended

Renewed interest is being manifested today in the bill which Governor Pinchot signed yesterday permitting the state to acquire a 40 mile stretch of the Lehigh Canal between Raubsville, Northampton County, and Yardley, Bucks County, to be preserved as a public park.

At a meeting in New Hope Thursday night Senator Clarence J. Buckman explained the bill in detail.

Senator Buckman also corrected the false report that he was the author of the bill which has been assailed on the ground that it would bring about the loss of the canal, asserting that it was an Administration bill which had been approved by Governor Pinchot and corrected by the Attorney General when it was handed to him to present in the Senate.

Unless the bill is signed before Saturday night, the Senator said, there is grave danger that the land which the canal company owns will be lost to the State to ultimately become a parkway area.

There is no doubt, the Senator said, that the canal will be abandoned as a waterway by the canal company, by legal right, and that the land which it occupies is the property in fee simple of the canal company which can sell it for any purposes it sees fit if the bill is not signed and the property taken over by the Commonwealth.

Senator Buckman began his address with an expression of gratitude to the Council for this opportunity to explain the bill and his connection with it—the first time he had been called upon publicly or privately, to do so. He also expressed surprise that in view of the fact that he has represented the county for 24 years in the Legislature and has "never been accused of doing anything inimicable to the welfare of Bucks county, the Governor should be asked to come into the county for a public hearing on the canal bill, and that he should not be invited to be present or consulted concerning the bill, although he was being held accountable for it.

"It was not my bill," asserted the Senator, "I had nothing to do with it except to present it as an Administration measure, approved by our good Governor, with whom I have cooperated 100 per cent, and corrected by the Attorney General. It was amended a time or two and I agreed to submit it because I believed it would save the canal and the scenic beauty of the Delaware, protecting it from exploitation which would probably be inevitable if this bill were not made a law. I wanted to protect the county from the calamity which misinformed persons, some of them outsiders, seemed about to bring down upon our heads.

"The canal was built by the State and was owned by the Commonwealth until 1858, when the Sanbury & Erie Railroad bought it. Much of the ground was taken by condemnation, not by an ordinary easement, and is the property of the owners in fee simple. It would not revert to the adjoining property owners, even though old deeds do show that they own to the middle of the canal.

Ten years after the railroad bought the canal property it was sold to the present owners, the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company which owns practically all of the stock, I am informed. In the early years the canal was profitable but by reason of changes in transportation methods it has in the past 11 years been the cause of an average annual loss of $15,000.

"So the canal company proposes to abandon it for canal purposes, as they have a legal right to do. It has the (Continued on Page 4)

FASHION AND BUSINESS

Land in South Africa which but a few years ago was producing ostrich feathers for milady's hats is now producing tobacco for her cigarettes. The small hat ruined the ostrich-raising industry, which as recently as 1913 was one of the most prosperous in the world.

When the business began to decline there were 750,000 birds in captivity. A pedigreed breeding ostrich was worth from $5,000 to $7,000, and the land on which the birds were kept sold for $1,000 an acre. Today most of the birds have been killed off, and the ostrich farmers who did not adjust themselves in time to changing fashions are bankrupt.

Fashion is as indifferent and merciless as the hurricane to the effect of its course. A variation in woman's costume may ruin a whole industry, make the wealthy penniless and throw countless thousands out of employment, but these possibilities do not prevent the change.

There is the automobile which spelled ruin for carriage, harness and whip manufacturers. The phonograph put piano manufacturers out of business and the radio caused a panic in the phonograph industry. Short skirts ended a long period of prosperity for the dress goods industry, but brought riches to silk hosiery makers. When the railroads laid their tracks canals drained their channels. The street railway business has been tottering ever since the popularization of the automobile and many railroad lines have been abandoned because of motor truck and bus competition.

Business of any sort is pretty much of a gamble.

ADVERTISING AND PRICES

Vast sums spent by large manufacturers and merchants for advertising are responsible for a popular superstition to the effect that advertised goods are higher in price than they would be if they were not advertised. The word "superstition" is used advisedly, because it has been demonstrated many times that advertising lowers, instead of raises, prices.

Advertising campaigns are costly and the consumer must pay for them, but they are paid for by new business the advertising attracts. There is nothing paradoxical in a situation where a manufacturer or merchant adds an extensive advertising appropriation to his budget and then turns around and cuts prices.

Million-dollar advertising programs make it possible for the manufacturer to lower his prices by so increasing his production that he can effect real economies through mass production and can spread his profit over a greater number of sales.

Advertising enlarges demand and thereby makes it possible for the retailer to buy stocks in larger quantities at lower cost. Moreover, goods well advertised are more than half sold before the customer enters the store, which lowers sales resistance and sales costs.

The price tags on advertised commodities are, in themselves, proof that business can save money for its customers by spending millions for advertising.

N. Y. Police School to Graduate
300 for Its Own Commencement

Gotham Police Recruits, After Six Months of Intensive Training, Are Ready to Step Into Traditional Blue to Defend the Public From the Scourge of Criminal Activity

THE BIG DAY - GRADUATION RIOT PRACTICE

There's many a new-born college graduate entering the proverbially frigid world at this season of the year, but 300 stalwart youths are soon to graduate from one of the most unusual schools in the world and there's no ordinary job awaiting them. From "rookie" cops intensively trained for six months in all the arts of safeguarding the public from the scourge of crime, these gallant 300 will soon join the ranks of the "finest" as worthy successors to the bluecoats of the New York Police Department, who have gone before them. Upper picture shows the "Big Chief," Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney (center), reviewing his future "Boys in Blue" with Acting Deputy Chief Inspector John J. Noonan (left), commander of the Recruits' Training School, and Chief Inspector John J. O'Brien (right).

Travers Lorrimer, shell-shocked war veteran and son of wealthy Margaret Lorrimer, mistakes pretty Mary Lou Thurston for Delight Harford, whom he is supposed to have married in England. Mrs. Lorrimer induces Mary Lou to assume the role of Delight, of whom no trace can be found. Travers is told he must begin again with friendship. His interest in life is renewed. No mention is made of his marriage until the visit of Larry Mitchell, Mary Lou's friend. Then Travers, believing Larry is in love with Mary Lou, reminds her she is his wife. At Christmas, Mary Lou, irritated by Travers' lack of holiday spirit, terms him selfish. Brought to his senses, he joins his mother and Mary Lou in delivering gifts to the needy. At the Veterans' Hospital, Travers meets his old buddy, Jimmy McEwan and plans to help him. Travers gives Mary Lou a sapphire ring and speaks of the seal ring he gave her.

CHAPTER XXVI.

HER heart sank, she was suddenly blackly depressed. He had married Delight Harford then . . . with a seal ring. His own, she imagined.

She tried to smile and succeeded only in looking wistful and unhappy. Well, she'd let him think she'd been awfully poor after the "death" of her cousins!

"It—had to go," she managed to say.

He nodded, thinking he understood, but wondering why surely it hadn't been valuable, couldn't have brought very much! But his heart conflicted with pity for her, the hard, difficult times she must have been through and of which she was so reluctant to speak.

"Then," he begged, "for the sake of Christmas-time, will you wear this one . . . for . . . me?"

She loved it! It was beautiful, it was perfect. She slipped it on her finger, her eyes turned from his suddenly radiant face to Mrs. Lorrimer's. Margaret nodded, quietly.

Larry broke into what he fondly hoped was a carol and the tension was over, the moment had passed.

Love On Sight.

Later Jenny Wynne came over with half a dozen youngsters, to demand to see all the presents, to gobble at candy and fruit and to drink egg nog, the old-fashioned kind that you don't drink, after all, but eat with a spoon. And the moment he laid eyes upon Jenny, Larry's fate was sealed.

She was as slim and as curved as a birch tree. She had fiery yellow curls and deep brown eyes. Her chin was pointed and so was her wit. She was an adorable little person and she was 19 years old.

"I'm a goner!" groaned Larry to Mary Lou. "How much money has she?"

"Millions, my poor dear! Her father is Wynne, of American Steel!"

Larry was crushed. But not for long.

"Even a steel king might welcome a rising young novelist as a son-in-law," he announced, "and I have three chapters written. Mary Lou, something tells me I will spend a lot of time in Westmill, Conn."

At midnight they turned back the rugs and turned on the radio and danced. Larry and Jenny floated about the floor in a series of graceful meanderings and brilliant wisecracks. Mary Lou, standing by Lorrimer, watched them. Now was her opportunity to rid him completely of any mad ideas he might still harbor.

"Larry's gone absolutely mad over Jenny Wynne," she whispered, "and he's sunk in gloom because he's a poor reporter and she's one of these heiresses you read about."

"Jenny has enough for two," answered Lorrimer, light hearted. "Larry wouldn't care for that arrangement," remarked Mary Lou.

"Good for Larry. Well, we'll have to give him a hand up . . . although playing Cupid is rather out of my line. Delight, I've not danced since—since a night you may remember. Shall we—try again?"

She gave herself into his arms, conscious that Margaret and Dr. Mathews, who was present, were watching. Conscious, too, that Jenny and her gang were also observant, amazed but too well bred to show it.

"Good heavens," said Jenny to Larry, "he hasn't danced since the war! Wonders will never cease! That girl's a darling, though. He's in love with her, of course . . . who could help it? Does it break your heart—you know her pretty well, don't you?" and she looked at him from under curling lashes in an entirely wicked fashion.

"No," Larry answered, steering that armful of mischief around the room, "no, it doesn't break my heart. Yes, I know her very well. No, of course he couldn't help being in love with her any more than I can help being in love with you."

"You're a fast worker!" commented Jenny, with admiration. The air music was lively, the air music was provocative. Mary Lou found dancing easy. Larry danced well—he hadn't forgotten. He danced her cleverly under the mistletoe which was caught with a bright ribbon to the glittering crystal chandelier. Stopped there, an instant . . . and kissed her. . . .

Love Conquers.

The music went on and the dancing. Mary Lou's knees were weak . . . were shaking under her. Margaret had seen that kiss, Mathews, too, and perhaps the others. That didn't matter, however. And Lorrimer had said no word. What did matter was the intolerable pressure at her heart, the sense of faintness, the sudden piercing knowledge.

She loved him . . . she loved him . . . terribly. And she was living a lie . . . a false Delight.

"Somehow or other that evening, which had commenced so happily and which suddenly changed to an interminable nightmare, ended. When the good-bys had been said and the voices of departing guests faded and the purr of motors grew fainter, Mary Lou finally reached her room. She undressed, endured Mrs. Lorrimer's friendly "May I look in, just to see that you're not too tired to cover yourself up?" and, after the older woman had gone, she lay awake, wretched, too miserable for tears, staring at the dim shapes of the furniture, wondering what she could do, what she must do.

As she lay there it grew clearer in her tormented mind that there was only one thing possible to do. She rose, slipped into her negligee, ran barefoot across the thick rug and switched on the light above the desk in the little living room; there, after a long pause, she selected pen and paper; dipped the pen in the ink—waited, shaken with a tearless sobbing. Presently, the ink having dried, she made a few unintelligible scratches on the paper, crumpled up the sheet, cast it away, dipped her pen and started afresh.

Only one thing to do—"Dear Mrs. Lorrimer," wrote Mary Lou, holding her chin high so the tears might not blot the sheet. "Don't think too badly of me. I can't stay any longer. It is impossible. Things have happened which have made it so. Please forgive me and thank you a thousand times for all you have done for me. I can't explain, I'd rather just leave this note and slip away. I'll never forget you or cease to be grateful, but I can't stay on."

She signed it, firmly enough, "Mary Lou."

After she had written that note, sealed and addressed it, Mary Lou sat quite still at the desk until her hands and feet grew ice cold and turning out the light she shivered and groped her way to bed. Once there she lay awake again for, it seemed to her, a very long time. She clasped her hands in the darkness and miserably, after the way of youth, wished herself dead.

The Best Way

The letter was in the desk drawer. She would wait for an opportunity, when, say, Mrs. Lorrimer would be in New York and Lorrimer perhaps busy about the place, then she would put the note in Mrs. Lorrimer's room and slip away, escape somewhere from the knowledge of a love which could never come to anything, a love founded, in a sense, upon a lie.

But the next morning dawned sunny and clear and cold. There was a firm coating of ice on the little lake and at breakfast Lorrimer cheerfully announced that skating was indicated. He had dragged out his old rusty skates from a closet and had had them sharpened and shined and had ordered a pair for Mary Lou some weeks before. So, after breakfast, well wrapped against the cold, they went down together to the little lake and Lorrimer knelt down to put on her skates for her. She looked on at his bent, dark head and wondered how she could ever leave him. Just to stay near him, somehow, seemed suddenly enough . . . but she couldn't stay.

He looked up then and found her eyes on him, intent and mysterious and sorrowful. He said, holding her slim ankle in the clasp of his bare hand:

"Don't be angry with me for last night, Delight. I couldn't help it. I—well, blame it on the Christmas spirit. I can't tell you how I dread your anger, your miscomprehension. You mean so much to me, you have been so much to me, so patient and understanding. If ever I get to be a useful citizen of this world again, I—I owe it to you. Do you forgive me?"

She said "Of course." Her heart was beating like a trip hammer. Lorrimer pulled her to her feet, put on his mittens and his cap and took her hands in his. Out they spun upon the gleaming surface of the lake, hand in hand, laughing like children, circling slowly, then faster, the blood running warmly through their veins, their cheeks whipped to fine color, their eyes clear and shining.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 20—

An overnight switch finds Leslie Howard playing opposite Ann Harding in "Devotion," a Paul Cavanagh, who was engaged for the part, back at Fox in "The Yellow Ticket." And apparently everyone is happy over the whole procedure.

The change is one that Miss Harding, herself, favors. Not that she discounts Cavanagh's ability, but since the first read "A Little Flat in the Temple" or "Devotion," she has visualized Howard in the role.

At that time she was having trouble with her contract and the picture was postponed. When the company and the star finally did agree on terms, Howard was at Fox for the lead in "The Brat."

On the other hand, Cavanagh, who is under Fox contract, was scheduled for "The Yellow Ticket." Unless recast, this production would have been held up, waiting for him to finish. So the trade around has kept everyone busy.

Also it has afforded Alan Dinehart a good break. This newcomer from the stage takes Howard's place in "The Brat."

"Devotion" will start Monday with Robert Milton directing. Two important additions to the cast are O. P. Heggie and Alison Skipworth.

MASQUERS PRODUCE SECOND.

Following the success of their first comedy, "Stout Hearts and Willing Hands," the actors' organization known as the Masquers, are producing its second burlesque two-reeler. It is, "Oh! Oh! Cleopatra," with alluring Dorothy Burgess as Cleo. Robert Woolsey plays Julius Caesar, and his teammate, Bert Wheeler, is Mark Antony. Joseph Santley is the writer and director. As in the first picture, a cast of Hollywood's best-known offer support.

LATEST GOSSIP.

Already Douglas Fairbanks is planning another trip. He hopes to go to Norway this coming Fall and indulge in a lot of fishing. Then over to Scotland for grouse hunting, and down into England for a few rounds of golf. His picture plans are indefinite, and if this urge is carried out there will probably be none forthcoming for some time. Richard Barthelmess is due back from New York next week with his daughter, Mary Hay Barthelmess. She is in Dick's care for the next six months...

Hollywood is getting a laugh out of the broad "A" that a platinum blonde player employed in pronouncing "racketeers" over the radio the other evening... Adolphe Menjou, who has played three or four pictures without a let-up, says the business is getting too much for him, and is leaving New York after he completes "The Sphinx Has Spoken." He may even extend his vacation to Europe... Ned Sparks is another who has left. He has six weeks away from the studio, and is heading toward his home town, Quebec... John Miljan, the arch villain, is a breeder of canary birds... Margaret Mann, who scored in "Four Sons," is working for John Ford, the director who discovered her. She plays a part in "The Brat."

ANOTHER NOVELIST

Between pictures W. S. Van Dyke has turned his talents to writing, and within the next few weeks his first book, "Horned Into Africa," will come off the presses. The story is the result of his trip to Africa, where he directed "Trader Horn." It tells both of the serious matters faced and the humorous situations the company was thrown into. The characters that made the trip are written in, and the author sticks to facts.

TAKING NO CHANCES.

Since radio announced to their salesmen that Richard Dix was to appear in another great outdoor story, he will make "Frontier" as the last picture under the present contract.

Of course, they hold him in other stories to be produced during the coming year, but if the company and the actor cannot have to terms they will, at least, have their biggest promise to the exhibitors fulfilled.

Incidentally it does not look as though they are going to get together.

"Frontier" is a story of the opening of the Dakotas to white settlement, and the discovery of gold in the Black Hills.

It is an original by Howard Estabrook, who adapted "Cimarron" to the screen. Naturally Wesley Ruggles, who adapted Edna Ferber's novel so expertly, will direct.

EMILIE AND FEDERALS
MARK UP VICTORIES

(By T. M. Juno)

Emilie and the Federals won their first games of the second half of the Bristol Twilight League when they defeated the Hibernians and St. Ann's respectively last night. The Emilie-A. O. H. game played at Emilie ended with the Hibernians being blanked 5-0. The Federals stopped the Saints on St. Ann's field by the score of 5-2.

Sullivan and Ashby were the hurlers in the fracas at Emilie. Both pitched wonderful ball and it was just a case of one pitcher receiving better support than another. Ashby's mates only had two errors while the Hibernians erred six times.

Emilie scored a run in the first and then put the game on ice in the third with four tallies. Thompson and Rockhill with two hits apiece were the best hitters of the night. Praul played a good game of ball at shortstop for the winners.

Errors featured the St. Ann's-Federals affair. The Saints were charged with seven errors while the men of Mulholland had four. Each team had five hits but the Federals bunched their hits with the aid of the miscues and scored two runs in the second and three in the third to win the game.

Paul Barrett with two hits, a single and a double led the hitters. On Monday night Emilie will play the Independents on St. Ann's field.

They Can "Take It"

By HARDIN BURNLEY

ABILITY to absorb much punishment and fight back fearfully is vital to the success of any real ring champion. And that, too, is a necessary asset for any battler who would carry on for any considerable length of time. Unless you can "take it," as the boys say, never think of pursuing a professional punching career.

Perhaps, the two best specimens of "take-it" talent among active fisticuffs are Battling Battalino, world's featherweight champion, and Paulino Uezedun, leather-battered Basque, who is to meet young Max Baer in a 20-round bout at Reno on July 4.

Battalino would not be a champion today if his remarkable stamina had not withstood the skilled assaults of Kid Chocolate and Fidel La Barba. In each instance he waded into his opponent incessantly, took their best punches, and came on to win the 15-round decisions. Not since Battling Nelson's time has a tougher youngster hammered his way to a fistic crown.

Paulino no longer looms as a heavyweight champ, but he's still a sturdy, plodding, courageous warrior worthy of his Basque blood. Max Schmeling cut him all but to pieces two years ago, yet Paulino was never knocked off his feet throughout the fifteen rounds.

Other heavies have given him terrible batterings, but in many instances the Basque came on to win through sheer strength and gameness. He took a fearful lacing from Primo Camera last fall but kept plugging along and, at the end of ten rounds, he had given the Italian giant plenty, too. Now he is to tackle the youthful, hard-hitting Baer in Jack Dempsey's Reno show. It is the first 20-rounder scheduled in the U. S. in many years. Paulino has never been knocked out. If he lasts the 20 with the slugging Baer (and the veteran may outwear the youngster before then) it may stamp Paulino for all time as one of the toughest of ringmen.

BEHIND BASEBALL'S DOLLAR SIGN
SCRIBE SEES PRIDE AND ROMANCE

NEW YORK, June 27—(INS)—A much discerning public thinks that professional baseball is a game stripped of romance in a rush for gold.

To be sure, the club owners can't operate without money. Not even the bank roll of Col. Jacob Ruppert or Philip De Gatsby Ball could stand the terrific expense of operating a club without gate receipts.

The players strive for the last cent in the range of their ability but behind the dollar sign is a burning desire for victory, a pride in achievement that makes players fight to the last play to win.

Suppose we step back stage in the drama that is baseball. There we see the homely side of the game that is fed on ballyhoo, cheers and excitement. Let us show a little scene that developed at Yankee Stadium when the Cleveland Indians were preparing to play the Yankees.

Out in front Vernon Gomez and Clint Brown were warming up for the game. The players had finished their fielding drills and had retired to the club house to change their flannel practice shirts for the dry garments they would use during the game.

Tommy Connolly, Bill McGowan and the dramatic Van Grafflin were about to go on the field. They encountered Tony Lazzeri and Roger Peckinpaugh.

"Tommy, I'd like to talk to you," said Peck. "Sure, Roger, what can I do for you?" asked the genial Connolly. "That play in Cleveland a while ago," said Peck. "You were dead wrong when you called Averill out. That decision meant the ball game."

"You made up your mind on that play before it was over." "You're wrong, Roger," said Connolly patiently. "I had an open mind on the matter until I saw Averill tagged out. The ball was between him and the bag. I know it turned the ball game, but the man was out. What would you want me to do, put on a Cleveland uniform?"

"Well, Averill said he was safe," persisted Peck, "and that game meant a lot to us."

"Every play means a lot to me," replied Tommy. "The only way I stay out there is to call plays right from where I see them. None of us is perfect, Roger, but I was right that time."

A few feet away the excitable Tony Lazzeri, bowed with the weight of a pernicious batting slump, collared Van Grafflin.

"That strike you called on me down in Washington was terrible," said Tony. "It put me in the hole, and I had to hit at the next ball to protect myself. I'm not asking you for anything, but I want what is mine."

"The ball was perfect," said Van Grafflin.

"Sure, that's why Spencer laughed at you and you threatened to put him out of the game," came back Lazzeri. "It's tough enough to be in a slump without having bad strikes called on you."

So it goes under every grandstand when player and umpire meet away from the eyes of the public. The players want everything that is theirs; sometimes they want everything. But just as they pride themselves on their ability the umpires pride themselves on their correctness in decisions.

It isn't arrogance alone that makes Bill Klem contend he never missed a decision in his life. He is sincere about it, and nothing that you nor I nor anyone else might say could convince the veteran National League arbiter that he ever was wrong in his entire career. Destroy Klem's confidence in his own infallibility, and you destroy Bill Klem.

The writer recalls vividly a play that came up in an exhibition game in St. Augustine a few years ago. George Sisler slid home with what was in fact the tying run, but Klem called him out. The writer thought Bill had missed the play, and later sought out the Giant catcher to verify the opinion.

"I never touched Sisler," said the catcher. "He slid around me completely. There's one Klem missed."

But that night Klem roared until the fronded palm trees quivered as he maintained that Sisler was out.

accused of being the author of the bill no one sought an interview with me to learn the true situation—and the Governor was brought into the county to a public hearing without an invitation being sent me, as it seems to me there should have been under the circumstances.

"I have had letters from some persons, some courteous and some scurrilous, but not a soul has sought me to learn the true facts.

"So I am grateful to the Council for this opportunity to say to you that if you are really 'Friends of the Delaware' you will get up early tomorrow and urge the Governor, in the 48 hours remaining, to sign the bill and save the canal company property.

"If the Governor does not sign the bill there is a real danger that the land will be lost to public uses. Within a few days I traveled the whole length of the canal from Easton to Bristol. I was impressed with the beauty of the scene and with its opportunities from a real estate standpoint. Here, I was impressed, was property worth hundreds of thousands of dollars which could be sold by the canal company, unless the State takes it, for any purposes it sees fit.

"Make no mistake about it: the canal will cease operation. The company has the legal right to do it, and ownership in fee simple of the land.

"I am informed that if the State acquires the property, there is an agreement that the canal company will
